

Why do we need growth?

According to our officials, politicians and economists, growth is the cure for all our ills. Whenever an economic problem arises, it seems that growth is the solution. What does it take to bring down unemployment? More growth. How do we balance the Social Security budget? More growth. How do we solve the debt problem? Growth still... [...]

Growth is the increase in GDP, which is the sum of the added values of the productive organizations in a territory. The workforce is dependent on local growth. As technologies inevitably decrease available jobs, growth works towards increasing them.

Michel Musolino, Economy for Dummies,
© First Éditions, John Wiley & Sons, Inc. 2018.

Why do we need growth?

According to our officials, politicians and economists, growth is the cure for all our ills. Whenever an economic problem arises, it seems that growth is the solution. What does it take to bring down unemployment? More growth. How do we balance the Social Security budget? More growth. How do we solve the debt problem? Growth still... [...]

Growth is the increase in GDP, which is the sum of the added values of the productive organizations in a territory. The workforce is dependent on local growth. As technologies inevitably decrease available jobs, growth works towards increasing them.

Michel Musolino, Economy for Dummies,
© First Éditions, John Wiley & Sons, Inc. 2018.

